tics is Lord Londonderry's onslaught upon the Ministry for allowing Mr. Chamberlain to force the Employers' Disability bill upon it. He deliberately charges the Government with entering upon a course which will eventually destroy the Conservative party, yet he is re-elected president of the Northern Union Conservative Association, with every sign of approval of his views by that body. Lord Londonderry is a sincere leader, with the courage of his convictions, but he can hardly hope to injure Mr. Chamberlain by crying over spilt milk.

The north gallery of the Imperial Institute was thrown open this morning for a press view of the Jubilea gifts. These number about six hundred, and include four hundred and fifty addresses of congratulation to the Queen from all the great cities in the United Kingdom and representative bodies of her subjects in all portions of the Empire. No private letters are exhibited, so that President McKinley's letter to the Queen, delivered by the Special Ambassador, is not shown The only American memorials are a few addresses from societies of British residents in New-York and elsewhere. The addresses are similar in phrasing and in a fervent spirit of loyal affection, but there is an endless variety in material, script, decoration and artisworkmanship. It is a unique collection. Witwatersrand sends its compliments incased in solid gold, ornamented with diamonds; Singapore unrolls a long magenta scroll with Chinese characters and dragons; the Indian addresses are wrought in embroidery and richly decorated with gems; from every country in the kingdom and every corner of the Empire there are messages of love and respect on parchment, linen, ivory or paper, in every imaginable text and script, with every possible variation of decorative effect and goldsmiths' craft.

Apart from the addresses there are 150 gifts selected for exhibition by the Queen. The most that the United States was willing to begin negotiaimportant is the Prince of Wales's present of a fine equestrian portrait of himself and the No answer of any kind has thus far been made, Duke of Connaught, by Detaille, with a Highland regiment in the background. The most interesting gifts are those from and the Chinese Ambassador, consisting of superb porcelains, embroideries and sacrificial vessels a thousand years old. The most fantastic | Treasury. object is a tiger's skull from Hyderabad, with an inkstand in the mouth and a clock and barometer in the eyes. All climes and all conditiens of wealth and poverty are represented in the collection. There are silk carpets of original design, curtains worked by Hindoo widows, wheeling chairs from wardrobe maids, and bicycles from Coventry's Mayor, walking sticks from Premiers and actresses and a parasol from German exports, from which it appears that there there is every reason to believe that the Government's position is as before stated—that it the oldest parliamentary veteran, jewels from princesses, silver flower baskets from Lady Mayoresses, porcelain from pecresses, milking stools from old ladies, and photographs from workinggirls. Within the sound of Bow Bells, it is a strange assortment of presents, but there is a silver thread which links them together. This feeling of profound respect and affection which the Queen inspires throughout the world. One of the most brilliant exhibitions of wedding presents ever seen in London is at Lansdowne House to-day, where a reception follows the marriage of the Marquis of Waterford and Lady Beatrix Fitzmaurice at St. George's, Hanover Square. The bride and bridegroom are related to all the great families of England and Ireland, and the list of presents includes nearly every titled name in the United Kingdom. It is a marvellous display of diamonds. The bride's wedding dress was trimmed with lace made by a sisterhood in Kerry, Ireland, and her eight bridesmaids wore Renaissance lace on their satin gowns, with embroidered shamrocks and butterflies. Nearly all the members of the Cabinet attended the wedding ceremony and reception earlier in the day. The Prince of Wales stood sponsor for the

After a week of Wagner opera, it will return next week to a lighter style of music, for which it is well suited. The chief theatrical novelty this week has been the production at the Court Theatre of the English version of "Die Königskinder," the last fairy tale which Humperdinck has set to music. It is not am opera, like "Hansel und Gretei," but a drama, opera, like "Hansel und Gretel," but a drama, with incidental music of great beauty, especially in the last act. GERMANY AND THE DINGLEY LAW.

WILLING NOW TO ESTABLISH RECIPROCITY WITH AMERICA-SOME TARIFF RESULTS. Berlin, Oct. 16 .- Soon after the new United States tariff went into effect the officials of the American Embassy informed the German Government tions for a reciprocity treaty under Clauses 2 and 4. but preparations are actually making to open negotiations, although the pace is slow. The question ing thoroughly considered in the imperial De partments of the Interior and of Finance collecting and compiling statistics for ascertaining not only the effects of the new tariff of the United States upon the different branches of German in dustry, but with a view of the possibility of extend ports. One of the principals in conducting this work is Herr Wermuth, the former German Com missioner at the World's Fair of Chicago, while the Emperor of China, the Dowager Empress the statistical branch is wholly in charge of Baron von Thielmann, formerly German Ambassador at Washington and now Secretary of the imperial

The Prince of Wales, of Mariborough, The Prince of Wales, of Belfast, Ireland, a young man of considerable of Be wealth when he met his future wife, while yachting in the English Channel. He was entertained by the Rev. Mr. Le Breton at St. Heliers, in the Island of Jersey, where he fell in love with the daughter and married her. They began married life quietly, but Mrs. Langtry soon attracted attention by her beauty. Sir John Millais being generally credited with having "discovered" her. She soon was on intimate terms with the most fashionable set of London society, and, as her tastes soon outgrew her husband's means, she went on the stage in 1881. There were scandalous stories about her early in her career as an actress, and her husband jarted from her. She has been trying for many years to get a divorce from him, having obtained a residence in California for the putpose. Her first effort having been found to be irregular, the proceedings were dropped for a time. Another effort was made about two years age, and last May the California divorce was granted to her. Mr. Langtry, however, ignored this, and last August he brought suit in an English court to be divorced from her. About the first of this month it was reported that he had become insane, and rumors were also rife that he was suffering from serious injuries received in a not clearly understood manner, but apparently on the railway near Chester, in England, or on the steamer hetween Dublin and Holyhead. It was also said that Mr. Langtry was suffering from delfrum tremens. He had been confined since that time in an asylum at Chester. Rev. Mr. Le Breton at St. Heliers, in the Island of

The Premier, Lord Salisbury, presided, and all the Ministers, with the exception of Lord James, the Chancellor of the Duchy of Lancaster; Viscount Cross, Lord Privy Seal, and Walter Long, the president of the Board

It is understood that the question of reopening the Indian mints for the coinage of silver was not decided, but it is added the matter was discussed and will shortly form the subject of further communication between the Chancellor of the Exchequer, Sir Michael Hicks-Beach, and the United States Monetary Commission. In spite of the statement that the question of the reopening of the Indian mints for the coinage of silver will form the subject of further Commission, it is believed the British Government has reached a decision not to enter into an international monetary conference. Further meetings with the American Commissioners will be held simply because they were previously arranged, as cabled last week.

WHAT LONDON TALKS ABOUT

London, October 16.

BRITISH RUFFIANISM.—The English news-papers, which are fond of preaching unctuous ser-mons on the subject of the "lawlessness of Americans," have food for reflection in two incidents in London and its suburbs this week. The Honor Oak Golf Club possessed One Tree Hill for three years. Golf Club possessed One Tree Hill for three years. Finding the property was being wantonly destroyed or stolen, the club caused the ground to be fenced in, thus shutting out the general public, to the great delight of the neighboring residents, whose life had been made hideous because of the congregating there of drunken, dog-fighting roughs from the slums of Deptford. Thereupon it was said that the public's rights were being encroached upon, and the agrication against the golfers, assiduously fomented, culminated on Sunday last, when a mob of about one thousand persons, armed with clubs and mes, tore down the fence and demolished every thing in sight. They destroyed the golf links, and, reinforced by over two thousand other rioters, the mob advanced upon the clubhouse, driving the golfers within.
